The Twelve Oaks Story

It's about family.

Why is family so important to the Twelve Oaks story? First, while we are a leading North American designer and manufacturer of top quality flooring products, with facilities, sales offices and a workforce across Canada and the USA, we've remained family owned and operated since we began operations over 20 years ago.

Our Founders

Our founders, Trevor, Aileen, Victor, Flora and John chose to put down roots in Canada for the opportunities it offered their family and their business. And they used their deeply held family values as a guiding light for the new venture.

Our People

We're proud of our teams, many of whom have been part our working family for a long time. They help us live up to the inspiration of our name, and shape our company spirit and corporate culture. They do so by setting an excellent example in their approach to their work and dedication to meeting our clients' needs.

We Give Back

Our involvement in the local community includes donations and fundraising efforts to support local charities and organizations, including the Mackenzie Health Foundation in their support of our frontline healthcare workers and their families.

Our Name

Inspired by the novel "Gone With the Wind", the Twelve Oaks name also reflects our family and corporate values. Twelve Oaks is the Wilkes family home, signified by 12 oak trees circling the entrance. At the end of the movie, most things have perished in the Civil War, but those 12 oak trees are still standing.

A Local Company A Global Perspective

Of course, as it is with every family, our home is very important. We take every opportunity to buy locally and support the economies in which our customers live and work. In addition to ensuring that our customers enjoy the widest selection, the highest quality and the best value, we search the globe for sustainably-produced flooring materials and products.
